The River

Parana river with a 1.000.000 square miles watershed and more than 3000 miles long, is the second biggest watercourse in south America. Only overcome by the Amazonas river, starting in Brazil then Paraguay ending in Argentina, flowing into the River Plate delta. It's massive water flow transports great amount of sediments which makes it a dynamic system, changing it's form constantly creating new banks, sandbars, islands, smaller side-streams, deltas, and dragging logs where the Dorado loves to hide.

You can fish almost year-round except for December. "The Tiger of the River", as locals call the Dorado, concentrates the major migration volume from June to November feeding from the Sabalo inflow.

Bella Vista town is located in Corrientes province and it is nowadays one of the best spots for Dorado fishing. A unique location where the river offers the best conditions and the clearest water flow available as a consequence of recent year's transformations and water levels fluctuation.

Fish and Tackle

"The Tiger of the River" will be our main target during our fishing sessions as also great chances for Pacu and Pira Pita depending on the time of the year. These last two are great fish to catch with a fly rod using a pattern that imitates the small fruits they eat on the sides of the river. Clear waters and sand banks on our area gives good chances of sight-fishing while they cruise the banks like sharks.

- Fly fishing tackle: 7 to 9 weight Rods for Dorado and Pacú and 5 to 6 weight for Pira Pitá. Floating lines for warm weather. Streamers will be the main fly to cast, some poppers and fruits for Pira Pita and Pacú.
- Bait cast tackle: Mid weigh rods (15-30lb) gear will be ideal to let you cast all day and enjoy the fierce fight of the Dorado. We will provide a list of lures that work great for our rivers.
